

This book's a BIG deal.
Like, really, really BIG.

"Why?" You ask.
Because it is FREE.

FREE Textbooks? We could give you the whole big backstory.
But since this is only a postcard, we'll just give it to you straight:

We're Flat World Knowledge, and we're "freeing" the textbook.

Why? Because it means freedom for you and your students.

- Freedom from skyrocketing prices.
- Freedom from rapid-fire new editions.
- Freedom to modify content to suit your course and teaching style.

Now back to those skyrocketing prices (and our Free Textbooks) for a sec.

College is already expensive enough without adding hundred-dollar-a-pop books into the mix. So we made ours free to read online. (We "freed" it, see?) And gave students the option to spend around $30 to get a print version of that very same free online book.

What? Do we have a book for your course?

We were hoping you'd ask and the answer is YES!

What the Traditional Textbook Industry Gets

A lot of sleepless nights.

We're nice people. It's not like we wish insomnia on our fellow man (or woman). However, we're also not going to pretend the old way of doing things is working. It's not. And until they can figure out how to bring you textbooks on your terms (like we are), we bet they won't be getting much sleep.

And in case you're wondering What We Get Out of It...

We know "free" raises a lot of red flags, so we'll just lay it out for you:

Yes, we let students access our books online for free. We just feel it's the right thing to do. After all, the high cost of textbooks means many students can't afford to go to school. And this just didn't sit well with us.

Mother Theresa? Not so much...

By the way, most students choose to buy alternate versions of the book and study aids from us at reasonable prices. We make money. We just believe in doing it responsibly.

What Students Get

Convenient, affordable choices.

Textbooks are expensive. Like crazy expensive. Like over $900-a-year expensive. We hear you; we think it's crazy, too.

So here's what we do: We allow free access to our textbooks online. Students who don't want to read online can choose from a variety of formats — a bound book, PDF or audio file. All for way less than they'd spend on a traditional textbook. Now we're talking crazy. Yup, crazy-amazing.

What Professors Get

Everything you've ever wanted from a textbook, but were afraid to ask for.

You know your stuff. You love to teach. But you don't always love your textbook. Wouldn't it be great if you could change it before it got to your students? We think so. And we figured out how to make it happen.

With Flat World, you get the same high-quality textbooks from authors you know and trust, but with two big differences:

1. You can customize your book for your course and teaching style. And yes, we made it super easy to do — no minimum enrollment, no passcodes, no hassle.
2. Now, all of your students will be able to access the textbook. This means you can spend all of your class time on your lesson plan rather than reviewing what's in the book for students who couldn't afford it.

Why? Because it means freedom for you and your students.

Freedom from skyrocketing prices, freedom from rapid-fire new editions and freedom to modify content to suit your course and teaching style. But the textbook industry's long-standing commitment to exceptional books by well-known authors? We decided that part was just fine as-is.

Now back to those skyrocketing wvprices for a sec.

College is already expensive enough without adding hundred-dollar-a-pop books into the mix. So we made ours free to read online. (We "freed" it, see?) And gave students the option to spend around $30 to get a print version of that very same free, online book.

What? You want to see this newly liberated textbook for yourself?

We were hoping you'd say that.
